Through Managing a Stressful Situation, a Student Finds His Calling

Nicholas Jones-Fielder studied financial literacy in order to learn how to pay for college, and in the process, he found his calling.

As a first-generation college student, Nicholas had no idea how he would fund his college education or how financial aid worked. He remembers thinking, “How am I going to fund my education? What is a loan? Will I have to pay it back? How much can I borrow? I was so stressed out!” With these concerns in mind, he attended a financial aid workshop given by The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis to learn more.

In addition to help from The Scholarship Foundation, he read everything he could find about financial aid and paying for college. As Nicholas researched financial aid options, looking for loans and scholarships, he began to take basic courses on finance, accounting, and economics to boost his financial literacy. The more he learned, the more at peace he felt. And through that peace, he found his passion. He enjoyed learning about personal finance and how money worked so much that he decided to pursue a career in the financial industry.

After attending St. Louis Community College–Meramec, Nicholas enrolled at the University of Missouri–Columbia. During his time at Mizzou, he joined Alpha Kappa Psi, a professional business fraternity, and met other like-minded people, while also serving as the treasurer of the organization. Nicholas was selected for several internships during his college career including Edward Jones, Commerce Bank, Veterans United Home Loans, and finally JPMorgan Chase & Co. He said it was an exciting, yet humbling experience. In addition to his coursework, he values his college years for providing him with opportunities to learn skills he would need as an adult. He learned time management, prioritization, and how to sustain friendships, all while attending school full-time and working part-time.

Nicholas graduated in 2017 with a bachelor’s degree in Business Administration with a dual emphasis in Finance and Real Estate. After graduating, he joined JPMorgan Chase & Co. as an analyst and moved to New York City. He calls New York a culture shock, but hurries to add that he means it in a good way. The diversity of foods, languages, people, and ideas is a constant enjoyment for him.

Nicholas is currently repaying his interest-free loan from The Scholarship Foundation and is scheduled to make the final payment in 2023. In addition to a loan, he also received a Bravo grant from the Foundation. He says, “The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis was an opportunity of a lifetime. The people at the Foundation who have served in my educational journey were truly invested in my success. I had constant support from the Foundation through financing my education, advice or guidance, and other avenues of aid (not just financial). The Scholarship Foundation was the supplemental support that I needed to take myself to the next level.”
Scholarship Foundation Students: Who Are They?

Below is an overview of the students who are financially supported by The Scholarship Foundation. In addition to financial support, the Foundation provides information and guidance to over 6,000 students and family members every year. *First-generation is defined here as the first person in a student’s immediate family to attend college.
When she last appeared in this newsletter in 2013, Kanika Turner was still a medical student. Since then, she graduated in 2014 and completed her family medicine residency in 2017. Now a family medicine physician, Kanika also teaches residents and medical students at Saint Louis University. She loves teaching and is inspired to be a mentor because her mentors have taken so much time to help her.

Recently promoted to associate medical director at Family Care Health Center, Kanika is realizing her goal of practicing medicine in an urban, underserved area. Even though she is no longer in school, she hasn't stopped learning. In 2020, she plans to sit for her board certification for addiction medicine. She is motivated to help treat addiction at her primary care facility, so her patients will not have to be referred elsewhere in order to receive care. In addition to working with patients at the health center, Kanika is a consulting physician for the Missouri Opioid State Targeted Response Team. She's excited to be able to use her knowledge to create a cultural change in the community so that all people are treated with respect and compassion.

Kanika is grateful for the support of The Scholarship Foundation. When she was an undergraduate student studying pre-medicine, she was nearly overwhelmed with being a single mother and working part-time, but because of the interest-free loans that she received from the Foundation, she did not have to give up on her dream. The Scholarship Foundation was so important to her as a student because she felt like she was welcomed as a part of the Foundation family, not just as a recipient of a check. She knew that she was able to call the advisors for help and ask questions about how to manage her student loans, even those that were not issued from The Scholarship Foundation. She appreciates that the Foundation is local and that she could stop by and build relationships.

Kanika is participating in the Foundation’s Dr. and Mrs. James Janney, Jr. Loan Forgiveness Program, which repays the students’ interest-free loans from medical school while they complete a residency and continue to work in a primary care field. She says she is grateful for the loan forgiveness, and she also appreciates knowing that someone shares her passion for family care. She specifically chose to become a family care physician because she wants to be there for her patients from before they are born until the end of their lives. As a Family Medicine Physician, she becomes a part of the community, and it is very rewarding when patients refer friends and other family members. She likes being able to hear how a sibling’s soccer game went or to ask about a cousin’s new baby. Kanika says, “Being a physician is a humble profession. I am privileged to have my patients share so much with me and trust me with their personal stories.”
Campus Visits Bring Advisors and Students Together

by Teresa Steinkamp, Advising Director

In 2010, staff at The Scholarship Foundation walked out of a meeting with students and school staff at a state university bewildered by the complicated maze of services available to low-income, first-generation students on campus. Many wonderful supports and opportunities existed, but how students might determine their eligibility—and for which programs—was complicated. Students had shared directly their frustration communicating with key offices on campus, especially financial aid. How might The Scholarship Foundation help?

Out of this experience, campus visits began. Since the 2010-2011 school year, Student Advisors have visited college campuses across Missouri where large numbers of Scholarship Foundation scholars enroll. The heart of campus visits is about relationships—meeting students and getting to know their hopes, goals, and dreams, as well as their challenges. These visits have become a cornerstone of advising students on persisting to degree completion. Campus visits provide advisors with a unique opportunity to visit with students face-to-face. Discussions center on students’ experience on campus and advisors can assess for academic, financial, or other concerns. Furthermore, advisors can intervene and offer support if necessary. Advisors might facilitate a connection between two students for tutoring, support renewal of a Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) or The Scholarship Foundation’s interest-free loan and/or grant programs, provide a much-needed grocery gift card during a moment of financial stress, or help a student research summer internship opportunities. Advisors also help celebrate students’ successes, of which there are many.

Félix Martínez says, upon reflecting on campus visits, “As a Student Advisor, campus visits are my favorite opportunity to engage with students not merely as an advisor and advisee, or ‘sender’ and

In the spring 2019 semester, Student Advisors have visited eight campuses: Southeast Missouri State University, Missouri University of Science & Technology, University of Missouri–Columbia, Truman State University, Missouri State University, University of Central Missouri, University of Missouri–Kansas City, and Southern Illinois University Edwardsville. Students attending universities near these eight campuses were also invited, and many came to visit with the advisors. Everyone enjoyed treats baked by Foundation board members and staff.

Quietly, Deeply Committed to Education: Morton Deutch

Avoiding fanfare or applause, Mr. Deutch bequeathed $3.8 million to The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis.

Morton Deutch was a quiet man who did not spend much time talking about himself. He finished high school during World War II and was recruited to counterintelligence just a few days after graduation. After the war ended, he studied engineering at Rolla School of Mines (now Missouri University of Science & Technology) and pursued a successful career at McDonnell Douglas (now Boeing).

Mr. Deutch established the Rose Deutch Designated Scholar Loan (DSL) in 1991 in memory of his mother who had inspired in him a love of learning since his childhood and the Jennie Bornstein DSL in 1996 in memory of his aunt, a teacher who made sure her nephew knew the power and possibility of his own intellect. Mr. Deutch also gave to the Foundation’s Bravo Grant Program, which provides additional funding to students who have demonstrated perseverance by overcoming extreme and persistent barriers to their education.

While incredibly generous to The Scholarship Foundation, he avoided the spotlight. After Mr. Deutch passed away in 2018, Executive Director Faith Sandler attended the funeral to pay her respects to the man who had quietly given the Foundation so much. She was astonished and touched when the rabbi announced that Mr. Deutch had left part of his estate in a bequest to The Scholarship Foundation. The surprise gift of $3.8 million is the largest single gift in the Foundation’s history, but it was the profound dedication behind the gift that made Faith choke back tears. She says, “We are so honored to be trusted with his legacy of generosity and steadfast belief in the power of education. We take that responsibility seriously.” Mr. Deutch’s legacy will live on in the students of the St. Louis area as they pursue postsecondary education through his support.

“We are so honored to be trusted with his legacy of generosity and steadfast belief in the power of education. We take that responsibility seriously.”

Executive Director,
The Scholarship Foundation

Crucial Contributors
The following donors have generously committed gifts to support students to, through, and beyond college.

Major Designated Gifts
Bergen Family Foundation provided support for the Ava’s Grace Scholarship Program, specifically for women in STEM fields.
Morton Deutch generously gave a bequest to the Foundation to support students for years to come (see article above).
Longtime Foundation partner Newman’s Own Foundation continued its strong support for interest-free loans.
Missouri Higher Education Loan Authority significantly increased its support for the Ava’s Grace Scholarship Program which assists students whose parents or guardians experience incarceration.
Missouri Scholarship and Loan Foundation also continued its generous support of the Ava’s Grace Scholarship Program.
Foundation partner The Saigh Foundation continued its strong support of the Bravo Grant Program.
St. Louis Public Schools Foundation partnered with The Scholarship Foundation to extend The Charles Gallagher Scholarship to a graduate of Soldan International Studies High School.
An unexpected and significant bequest was given to the Foundation by the Roberta Sterling Charitable Remainder Trust.

New Designated Scholar Loans
The William and Jane Schmalz Charitable Fund created two additional Jane E. and William A. Schmalz DSLs to support immigrant students.
Joan and Marcus Sessel created two new DSLs. The new DSLs, the Robert W. Howell DSL and the Helen Lindberg DSL, are in memory of dear friends.

Significant Centennial Commitments
In honor of the Foundation’s centennial, an anonymous gift to support nursing students was made by a family who has long supported the Foundation.
The Ann and Paul Arenberg Family increased its commitment to the Arenberg Partner Fund Advising Program and the students it serves.
Hauck Charitable Foundation gave a significant gift in support of low-income and first-generation students.
Sid Goldstein, Laura Kipnis, Lynne Kipnis, and Steve Rothman committed a notable endowment gift to support the future work of the Foundation.
Patty and Larry Malashock committed a substantial multi-year pledge in support of the Foundation’s centennial year.
Donna Moog and Leonard Landsbaum made a generous multi-year commitment to student support in honor of the Foundation’s centennial.
Pershing Charitable Trust gave a substantial centennial gift to support the Foundation’s Interest-Free Loan Program.
Linda and Pete Werner generously created the Scholarship for St. Louis Public School Graduates, which will support postsecondary educational opportunity, reduce student debt, encourage those who may be low income or first in their families to earn a degree, and contribute to advancing racial equity in the region.
In 2018-2019, the Foundation’s advocacy program expanded to include three groups of interns training and learning together under a coordinated advocacy curriculum. The advocacy internship program is made up of the Education Policy Internship and the Deaconess Nursing Fellowship, both funded by Deaconess Foundation, and the Equifax Finance Fellowship funded by Equifax. The interns will focus on education, health, and finance policy, respectively. This strengthened and expanded program is jointly facilitated by Foundation Manager of Advocacy Karissa Anderson and Advising Director Teresa Steinkamp, with support from Foundation Advocacy Associate and former Education Policy Intern Karina Arango.

The Scholarship Foundation’s Advocacy Program is built on the premise that the best and most effective advocacy efforts are inclusive of and led by those who are directly affected by policy decisions. The Foundation approaches advocacy in two ways: Advocacy Internships and the Active Advocacy Coalition.

Interns are current students or recent graduates who combine their personal experience and understanding of community needs to craft and advocate for a policy agenda. Interns receive intensive training on policy and legislative processes, racial equity, and communication strategy over the 9-month program. Through roleplaying, research, and collaborative problem solving, interns gain the tools they need to advocate for themselves and their peers. As the legislative session opens in January, the interns set meetings with legislators, give presentations, and prepare explanatory documents and press releases.

The Active Advocacy Coalition is a partnership between the Foundation and St. Louis Graduates. This state-wide coalition includes student members from nearly every college campus in Missouri. Both the interns and coalition members are dedicated to college access and affordability for students who need financial support to access and complete their degrees.

Education Policy Interns
- Alisson Morales, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville
- Areli Muñoz Reyes, St. Louis Community College–Forest Park
- Selena Osthoff, Saint Louis University
- Omida Shahab, Saint Louis University
- Gary Stevenson, Saint Louis University

Deaconess Nursing Scholars
- Abigail Franken, Missouri Baptist University
- Lavinia Yalengbiye, University of Missouri-St. Louis

Equifax Finance Fellows
- Jose Rodriguez Garcia, Southern Illinois University Edwardsville
- Sara Rutherford, Saint Louis University
- Raamish Saeed, Saint Louis University

Advocacy Staff
- Karissa Anderson, Manager of Advocacy
- Karina Arango, Advocacy Associate

Student-Led Advocacy Learning Lab
The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis, St. Louis Graduates, and The Active Advocacy Coalition hosted the Student-Led Advocacy Learning Lab in St. Louis on November 13 and 14, 2018. Staff and students from eleven different national and local organizations convened at The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis to brainstorm ways to strengthen their work and explore opportunities to create a national advocacy network. Participating groups included 10,000 Degrees, Campaign for College Opportunity, Deaconess Foundation, Kansas Missouri Dream Alliance, Leaders Enterprise for a Diverse America (LEDA), Southern California College Access Network, uAspire, Wyman, Trellis Foundation, and Scholarship Foundation staff and Education Policy Interns.
The Scholarship Foundation is grateful to Trellis Foundation for its support of the Learning Lab, with special thanks to Trellis Director of Partnerships & Programs Jenny Achilles for her presence.

Participants built community, shared stories and policy goals, and discussed student-led advocacy more broadly. Highlights included a screening of Show Me Democracy, a panel of young, local elected officials, including former Education Policy Intern Representative Kevin Windham, Jr., and a review of the newly created Student-Led Advocacy Guide. This guide was produced by Foundation Manager of Advocacy Karissa Anderson and Advocacy Associate Karina Arango to serve as a curriculum for organizations creating student-led advocacy initiatives in their own communities.

Active Advocacy Coalition Conference 2019
The third annual Active Advocacy Coalition Conference brought together 85 students to learn policy and advocacy tactics. The conference was held at the new Deaconess Center for Child Well-Being, which was fitting since Deaconess was an initial contributor to the Education Policy Internship that leads the Coalition. Students were united in the mission of increasing college access and affordability for themselves and their peers. The first day of the conference consisted of workshop sessions including story-telling, understanding state and federal policy, power-mapping, and self-care. On day two, the students headed to Jefferson City armed with knowledge, stories, and heart. Initially both eager and anxious about the journey, the students ended the day excited for their next trip to the capitol. Many thanks to the National College Access Network, Deaconess Foundation, Trellis Foundation, St. Louis Graduates, and Southeast Missouri State University for making the conference a success!

2019 Missouri Legislative Session
The 100th Missouri General Assembly opened January 8, 2019 and brought students new opportunities to work toward change. Policy priorities include equitable tuition rates for students who are undocumented and increasing the need-based Access Missouri Grant. Foundation Manager of Advocacy Karissa Anderson testified before the Senate Appropriations Committee on January 23, 2019 in support of increased funding for Access Missouri.

Washington, DC Trip and National Policy Priorities
In late February, Karissa and Karina traveled to Washington, D.C. with two interns, Omida Shahab and Alisson Morales. While in the capital, they met with legislators from Missouri, including Senators Roy Blunt and Josh Hawley and Representative Blaine Luetkemeyer, to discuss the advocacy program’s federal policy priorities. These priorities include boosting Pell Grant funding and indexing it to inflation, preserving campus-based aid such as work-study and Supplemental Education Opportunity Grant funds, and assuring the passage of a clean DREAM Act to protect undocumented young people from deportation and provide them opportunities for education. During the trip, Karissa also moderated a panel of students who educated legislators on the issues their constituents face such as challenges completing the FAFSA and limitations on what Pell Grants can fund. The trip was funded by the National College Access Network through a member advocacy grant.
Pat Cox: Planning Ahead to Strengthen Her Community

Pat Cox has always been committed to building strong communities. When she and her husband, Graham Colditz, moved to St. Louis in 2007, she immediately began participating in local and presidential elections, focusing on voter registration, canvassing, and driving voters to the polls. Through that work, she got to know those in her community, including her neighbor, Malaika Horne, then a Scholarship Foundation board member. Malaika introduced her sister, ScholarShop volunteer Gwen Moore, to Pat as well. They told her about the Foundation, and Pat was fascinated by the Interest-Free Loan Program. She was impressed that the loans were based upon dignity, trust, and mutual respect. When she was nominated for board membership in 2010, she gladly accepted.

As the first generation of her family to attend college, Pat chose the University of California Santa Cruz partially due to its reasonable cost. She worked in the school cafeteria during the school year and as a reporter for her hometown newspaper in high school and during the summers. She knows that the cost of education has risen so much that such part-time jobs are not enough for current students. Pat worries that people are not making enough money to pay for their education themselves, and she supports the revolving loan fund because it continues to defray the expenses of getting an education.

Pat wants her legacy to be like the founders of The Scholarship Foundation who embodied community by assisting young people to become educated so that they, in turn, could help the next generation of students in an ever-expanding circle of community. With this in mind, Pat and Graham began discussing how they would like to structure their affairs. Pat and Graham each chose a specific organization to receive a legacy gift. Graham selected the National Academy of Sciences which was founded by an Act of Congress in 1883. Pat knew she wanted to choose an equally strong, but local, organization. The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis was an obvious choice to her.

Pat learned the value of planning ahead from her family, especially her parents and her Aunt Louise and Uncle George. She comes from a long line of frugal people, which is why she and Graham chose to use a revocable trust in their estate plan. They wanted to ensure it would not be necessary for their estate to go through probate, therefore reducing legal fees and increasing the amount that will go towards their intended recipients.

Pat has previously established, along with her family, the Louise E. and George J. Dobratz Designated Scholar Loan in 2012 to honor her aunt and uncle’s persistence and love of learning despite challenging early lives. A few years later, she and Graham created the Daisy Wilson Designated Scholar Loan in 2014 in memory of a neighborhood mainstay of voter participation, beginning with the New Deal. Pat says their philosophy has always been to give as much as they can every year, and they have been surprised at how it adds up over time. Though she fulfilled her full 8-year term as a board member in 2018, she is as dedicated to the Foundation as ever because she knows that the work remains necessary. Besides, she says, "Interest-free loans are extremely smart and practical. How could you not like them?"

Pat wants her legacy to be like the founders of The Scholarship Foundation who embodied community by assisting young people to become educated so that they, in turn, could help the next generation of students in an ever-expanding circle of community.

If The Scholarship Foundation is already in your will, trust, or estate plan, then thank you! Would you like to be listed with others who have arranged to leave future gifts? Please let the Foundation know about your plans.

An Interview with Faith Sandler: 30 Years as Executive Director
by Audrey Shanfeld, Honorary Life Director

“This organization wasn’t started for the purpose of making loans. It was created from a commitment to democracy, community, and to giving people the opportunity to engage effectively in their own well-being and their own community.”

Audrey: Little did I know 30 years ago, that I would be interviewing you now. Looking back, so much has happened since you joined the Foundation. Let’s start at the beginning. Tell me about yourself growing up.

Faith: My parents were educators, so I was raised on a commitment to education, the idea that life is about learning, and that everyone should have access or opportunity. I think that, always, who I am and what I do started with my family, my parents.

Audrey: How did you hear about The Scholarship Foundation and what prompted you to apply?

Faith: I was working in school desegregation in the City of St. Louis, and my job was to monitor and evaluate non-integrated school quality and improvement, but each time I would point out a flaw in a program, more of the budget would be cut. My work was having the opposite effect that I wanted it to have. I saw an ad for the Foundation, and I knew that there couldn’t be a better job for me.

Audrey: You joined the Foundation in 1989 with minimal staff, three Board co-presidents (of which I was one!), and lots of volunteers who were keeping records by hand. How did you deal with all this?

Faith: Well, I knew that the volunteers and people on the board knew ten times more than I did.

Audrey: I remember, you spent the first year listening.

Faith: Yes, and learning. Everyone had reason to be proud of getting that far entirely on volunteers and then with a very small staff. It was clear to me how hard everyone had worked and how much they had accomplished.

Audrey: What were your first projects?

Faith: There was a need to make loan repayment more formal and compliant with debt law. And we also needed to expand our presence in the community. When I came to The Scholarship Foundation, the first thing they told me was that we have lots of money, but we can’t find the students.

Audrey: We’ve obviously turned that around!

Faith: That’s a major way that things have changed; there’s such demand now.

Audrey: When I say the words “The Scholarship Foundation,” it makes you smile. Tell me about that.

Faith: Oh, I’m really proud of who we are and of who we’ve been, from the beginning to now.

Audrey: See, you’re smiling now.

Faith: Yes, I am! To me the work is an incredible privilege. And I love it.

Student Advising Program

providing information, guidance, and support to students and their families

Advising Director Teresa Steinkamp presents a Knowledge is Power workshop to students and their families at Southeast Missouri State University. Workshops are only one of the ways that the Student Advising Program provides information, guidance, and support to students and their families. To learn more, turn to page 4 where Teresa writes about the ways that campus visits from advisors help students succeed.

THE SCHOLARSHIP FOUNDATION

Of St. Louis, a nonprofit organization founded in 1920, is based upon the conviction that an educated society is essential to a healthy democracy. The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis sees education as a catalyst, an agent of change for individuals, families, communities, and nations. The Foundation envisions a community in which doors will not be closed to those who lack financial resources, and postsecondary education will be accessible to all regardless of economic circumstance. This is our mission and vision.

With the potential to succeed, education will be available to all.

The 2019-2020 Advisory Board is comprised of students who have been fortunate to be awarded scholarships and financial assistance. Their stories offer inspiration, examples of determined individuals, and a testament to the power of education. Through their success, the Scholarship Foundation hopes to inspire others to pursue education in their community.

Opening Doors 2019 Spring

Mission & Vision

Our Mission:

The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis is committed to equalizing opportunities to students and their families. We provide information, guidance, and support to students and their families. Our mission is to help students succeed.

Our Vision:

The Scholarship Foundation of St. Louis aims to create a more educated society by providing equal opportunities for all students. Our vision is to foster a community where education is accessible to all, regardless of economic background.
